Subject: Help distribute Palestine advocacy tool from the University of Oxford
 From: PLO Mission ' Washington, DC

Greetings from the Refugee Studies Centre, University of Oxford. We would be grateful if you could read this email and contact us fmr@qeh.ox.ac.uk
 +44 1865 280700

Thanks to donor support, we are able to send many thousands of copies of our magazine to policy and opinion-makers who are ignorant or ill-informed about Palestinian refugee issues. Could you help us with distribution? Could you send us your postal address and let us know how many copies you would like and in which language edition. Perhaps you could send us names and addresses of politicians and journalists to send copies to? Can you identify pro-Palestinian celebrities - particularly in the United States - who may be able to help our publicity efforts?

Palestinian displacement: a case apart? www.fmreview.org/palestine.htm

The September 2006 issue of the in-house magazine of the University of Oxford's Refugee Studies Centre includes a major feature on Palestinian displacement. Twenty-eight articles by UN, Palestinian and international human rights organisations, Palestinian scholars in the diaspora and Jewish and Israeli activist groups examine the root causes of the displacement of Palestinians, the consequences of the failure to apply international humanitarian law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Palestinian entitlement to protection and compensation.

The articles - which are available online - discuss how failure to address the Palestinian refugee crisis represents perhaps the gravest shortcoming of the UN since its foundation. The international community has not exerted sufficient political will to advance durable solutions consistent with international law and Security Council resolutions requiring Israel to withdraw from Palestinian territory it occupied in 1967. Durable solutions for displaced Palestinians have been discussed without reference to the legal norms applied in other refugee cases. Refugee rights, entitlements to compensation or restitution and the rights to protection of those Palestinians living under continued military occupation were not central to the now-moribund Oslo peace process ' nor are they part of the subsequent US-sponsored ' Performance-Based Roadmap to a Permanent Two-State Solution'. Creeping annexation continues unchecked. Upon completion of Israel's Wall, Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip will be restricted to a series of non-contiguous enclaves which constitute an eighth of the area of historic Palestine. Despite pro-democracy rhetoric, Western response to the internationally-validated Palestinian legislative elections in January 2006 has sparked a politically-induced crisis and crippled the Palestinian economy. Ordinary Palestinians are suffering as donors freeze funding required to maintain humanitarian assistance and development programmes.

We are grateful to the donors whose support enables us to substantially increase our normal print runs ' A M Qattan Foundation, DanChurchAid, Interpal, Jews for Justice for Palestinians,

Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Save the Children UK, the Sir Joseph Hotung Programme on Law, Human Rights and Peace Building in the Middle East, the Sultan of Oman, the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees (UNRWA) and the Welfare Association.

This issue is being published in English, Arabic, Hebrew, French and Spanish. We hope it may improve understanding of Palestinian displacement and would welcome your support in ensuring hard copies reach policy- and opinion-makers in the United States, Europe and the Middle East. If you are able to assist with distribution, please email the editors. fmr@qeh.ox.ac.uk

We encourage you to circulate or reproduce any of these articles in their entirety but please ensure you cite this url: <http://www.fmreview.org/palestine.htm> and let us know. We would also be grateful if you could forward this email
